of the second part,
(allow for additional parties as necessary).

Whereas the foregoing parties have resolved to form a Joint Venture under the title of

for the exclusive purposes of securing and/or executing the Contract to be awarded by (name of Employer)

for (brief description of Contract)

Now it is hereby agreed as follows :

TERMINATION CONTRACT

Employer [name of company] and Employee [employee's name] hereby agree to this Termination Contract.

Employee and Employer had an employment agreement from [start date] to [termination date], in which they agreed that they would resolve any employment dispute as follows [method of dispute resolution, such as arbitration, and/or choice of law].

Employee hereby agrees and obligates [himself/herself] to the following:

- Employee will not engage in any competition with Employer for the period of [duration of non competition agreement, such as one year], which includes employment with another company in the same or similar business as Employer, establishment of a new company in the same or similar business as Employer, or any contractual arrangement under which Employee consults, advises, or assists another company in the same or similar business.
- Employee will not engage in conduct or make statements relating to [his/her] employment or this Termination Contract that can be construed as critical or derogatory of Employer its employees, agents, partners, shareholders, officers, directors, and affiliated companies.
- Employee releases and discharges all claims, complaints, charges, disputes, and demands against Employer and its employees, agents, partners, shareholders, officers, directors, and affiliated companies, except for claims, complaints, charges, disputes, or demands that could arise from a breach of this Termination Contract, such as claims for back pay, front pay, damages, and fees such as attorneys' fees, that could arise from federal or state employment laws or from any conduct by Employer. Employee has had the opportunity to consult with [his/her] attorney and is aware of [his/her] legal rights, but knowingly and voluntarily waives those rights to the extent possible under law.
- Employee will not share, divulge or disclose any information about Employer or its employees, agents, partners, shareholders, officers, directors, and affiliated companies that Employee knows is confidential or is considered a trade secret, trademark, service mark, trade name, patent, or copyright, including information or a product invented or developed by Employee during [his/her] employment with Employer.
- Employee has surrendered to Employer paper and electronic copies of all letters, memoranda, documents, records, and other material that is the property of Employer. Employee has also surrendered to Employer all other tangible property of Employer, including keys, products, charge cards, telephones, pagers, computer and other equipment, and vehicles.
- Employee will not share, divulge, or disclose the provisions of this Termination Agreement except to Employee's family, agents, representatives, or advisors, or to the extent required by law.

Employer and Employee further agree that in consideration for the above agreements and promises, Employer will pay Employee as follows: [terms of severance payment, such as lump-sum amount or payment schedule]. Such severance payment constitutes the entire obligation of Employer to Employee.

Jane Smith, Chair of Physiology
Bill Dean, Dean of Medicine

FROM: Lloyd Henderson, Executive Director, College of Extended Learning (CEL)

RE: Contract to develop PHYG 1234 as a UNB Online course

DEVELOPMENT CONTRACT

The signatories agree to the following terms and conditions to develop online course PHYG 1234 Introduction to Physiology (the Course). The Course will be offered in an open-entry format through UNB Online.

By signing this contract, the Chair (the Chair of the Department of Physiology (the Department) and the Dean (the Dean) of the Faculty of Medicine (the Faculty) indicate their approval for the development of the Course. The Chair will appoint John Doe as subject matter expert (the SME) to develop the Course. UNB Online can assist in making the Course suitable for on-line delivery via Desire2Learn, UNB's learning management system. UNB Online can also provide the necessary style guides and layouts to ensure that best-practices are followed and that the format of the Course is consistent with other courses offered through UNB Online. The Course shall be ready for delivery by 31 December 2012.

The Course will be reviewed by a peer appointed by the Department to ensure that it meets academic requirements. UNB Online will review the Course for consistency in format and presentation, but will not review its content.

The relevant articles in the Collective Agreement in force between the AUNHT and UNB shall apply in matters pertaining to the ownership of intellectual property and copyright, and the hiring and payment of instructors to develop UNB Online courses.

As developer of the Course, UNB Online will also offer the SME a Multi-Year Appointment to teach the course. Terms pertaining to the offer of appointment to teach the Course and compensation for teaching are outlined in the teaching contract entitled "Contract to teach PHYG 1234 as a UNB Online course" (the Teaching Contract).

UNB Online will provide the equivalent of one base three-credit stipend to support the development of the Course. This fee will be paid to the SME following UNB's regulations regarding payments to course developers and instructors. Payment of this fee grants UNB a Part of being a professional is to deal with copyright and license legalities of your work or transfer the property to your client. A contract is a great way to handle all this.3. Process The third great reason for using an independent contract is "Process." A contract is not only for the start and end of a project. In fact, do you also give details about what will happen on the road? Suppose a scenario here: You have a deadline to know it that has been established by the customer. The deadline tells you when the client wants to launch the project. So, you have to have the job completed by then. Now, you send them a piece for feedback and let's say you have a work week to do after the customer returns with feedback. If the customer does not respond to you for several days, do you then have to redeem that value of the working weeks in a few days before the deadline? Or is the deadline pushed? Your contract should detail all this.7 Free Contract Templates for Web DevelopersIt is very difficult to write a contract from scratch. I'm not sure of the legalities involved in this process, and that's definitely not something I can advise. This is where you can use free freelance contract templates. Writing out an e-commerce website agreement can be tricky, though, especially for beginners with little to no experience. In such cases, and even for more experienced developers, it±ÁÁÁs always a good idea to use a template, like the Webmaster contract template or the Freelance Web Designer Contract by Eskymo. Having a standard form of agreement for design services is important; contracts let both parties highlight the services and behavior they expect from one another. The cost and project duration are also mentioned to avoid future quarrels.Á Á You can find an excellent web development retainer agreement online to help you out. Use one from a reputable contract writing website, like ours, and employ it to plan out your mode of work and list any demands you may have from the client, as well as their expectations of you. Being a web designer is a great job. Web design is a blooming and in-demand field. Many designers can expect to be employed and work with the same client for months, or even years, on end. This is because websites need constant maintenance and a web designer to look after it. If websites are not maintained, they may lose out on views, and their engagement will decline. They will also begin to grow old and go out of fashion, which is dangerous for any client and their business. Web design is composed of many things, but the primary element is that of design. Designers must plan out a suitable color palette, choose effective fonts and styles, curate a format for the website to follow, and create pages across the website to cater to all the information their client would want to place across the platform. They should also try to create a great user experience by employing an easy to work with and accessible website format. Web designers must use their own and skills to create an online platform that attracts the visitor's eye and meets the style and design requirements established by the customer. To ensure that all of these requirements are met within the time frame, both parties must list these points in a contract and sign them to formally seal the agreement. Writing an effective website design contract can be a challenge, especially if it is new to the concept. You should try to write an effective but simple design agreement. Excessive supplement to clauses will only leave your client confused, which can slow down the general agreement and the production process. To make things easier, we have compiled a checklist for web site development agreement: highlight all the terms and conditions of development contract of your website "and make sure that Your customer is also aware of them. Your customer must accept all the design terms and conditions of your website in advance to help avoid any confusion and disagreements once you start working. Add details about maintenance and management. Websites require constant maintenance, so it is important to develop a management contract of the website and to list the terms and conditions of maintenance of your website. Accuses payment and time scale before starting to work. This will help both parties avoid future problems. In addition to these elements, the web designer and the customer should also discuss any other important detail in advance. These details may be too small or insignificant to list in an official contract document, but they must be discussed independently. This could include a general description of the website design and any preferred color scheme that the customer may have. Discussing these topics will help you, theWeb, to create a brilliant final product that the customer is intended to love. If you prefer to use a prefabricated web contract, continue and look for some lines in line.
